ABSTRACT

This research aims to study the problems and countermeasures in financial management of university, by adopting effective research methods such as theoretical analysis, comparative analysis, qualitative analysis and quantitative analysis. Taking Tianjin University as an example, this paper analyzes the problems existing in the current financial management of universities in China: (1) The source of income is overly dependent on financial appropriation, and the income-generating capacity of universities is not good enough. (2) The budget management system is unreasonable, which affects the use efficiency of funds. (3) The informatization construction of financial management can't meet the requirement of development. Finally, this paper puts forward relevant suggestions, hoping to provide reference for the financial management of universities.

Keywords: university, financial management, budget.
